James Hoeschele AsBIC Award

The "James Hoeschele AsBIC Award" was established with generous support from Prof. James Hoeschele (Eastern Michigan University), the co-inventor of carboplatin, to recognize outstanding scientific contributions in biological inorganic chemistry of scientists in their mid-careers in the Asia-Pacific region. The Award aims to encourage collaboration and strengthen cooperation within the Asia-Pacific biological inorganic chemistry community. The Award selection will be made by a review panel consisting of members of the AsBIC Steering Committee, representative of all areas, both scientific and geographic.

Award Details

Up to two awards will be presented every alternate year. The award recipients will be presented with a cash prize of US$500 and award certificate. The award recipients will be invited to receive their prizes and deliver their award lectures at the next AsBIC conference.

Eligibility

To be eligible for the award, the candidate must hold Society of Biological Inorganic Chemistry (SBIC) membership and awarded his/her PhD degree not more than 25 years before the start of the AsBIC conference. Career interruptions will be taken into consideration:

- carer's responsibility;
- disruption due to international relocation for post-doctoral studies or other research employment not exceeding 3 months per international relocation;
- illness;
- maternity or parental leave; and/or
- unemployment, or non-research employment.

Register at <http://www.sbichem.org> to become an SBIC Member.

Application Process

Application dossier to include the following:

- Completed online application | <https://forms.office.com/r/e2XRuwqbCG>
- Letter of application addressed to Selection Committee describing the accomplishments of the candidate that meet the criterion of "outstanding research in biological inorganic chemistry"
- Curriculum Vitae including a list of publications
- The five most influential publications by the candidate as the primary author that support the nomination/application
